Tony Peacock
Chief Executive
Invasive Animals Cooperative Research Centre

Tony Peacock is Chief Executive of the Invasive Animals Cooperative Research Centre (IA CRC) based at the University of Canberra.

The IA CRC is working with the USDA, CSIRO, Senestech Inc and others on a range of biotech products for fertility control of wild animals.

Biotechnology is also employed in the detection of pest animals at very low densities through DNA scat analysis and other techniques.

Tony has served on the Board of a number of biotech companies and has been Managing Director of the Pig R&D Corporation and a researcher at the Universities of Saskatchewan and Melbourne prior to his current appointment.
