AUSTRALIA'S biotechnology sector could benefit from partnerships with India's industry, says Australia's national body.

AusBiotech said India's industry had strong government support and was resilient and growing despite current market conditions.

``With India's track record of fast growth, the largest offering of FDA-approved (U.S. Food and Drug Administration) manufacturing facilities outside the U.S. and strong government support with the national biotechnology strategy, there are significant prospects and opportunities for India and Australia to work closely together," the national biotech body said.
